COMMITTEES.

At a meeting of the Council held Dec. 30, the numerous suggestions received by mail were discussed, and action was taken by naming the functions and chairmen of a number of committees. Four committees have in hand the advancement and diffusion of knowledge of meteorology, and seven committees have charge of the development of the numerous applications of meteorology to human affairs. The chairmen are to name the active members of their committees and all fellows and members of the Society are invited to become self-appointed members of the committees and to correspond with the active members of the committees and with one another. The chairmen will publish monthly reports of the activities of the committees in the Bulletin of the Society.

The following are the names and chairmen of the eleven committees:

Research, C. F. Marvin.

Meteorological instruction, W. M. Wilson.

Public information, C. F. Talman.

Membership, C. F. Brooks.
