The Board of Directors of Enterprise Electronics Corporation recently announced the appointment of Larry P. Sabourin as president of the company.

Sabourin received his B.S. degree in civil engineering from Michigan Technological University and his M.S. degree in business management from the University of Arkansas. He retired from the U.S. Air Force after serving 20 years as a pilot, staff officer, and commander. After his retirement from the Air Force, Sabourin was employed by Lockheed Martin where he was responsible for managing, budgeting, operating, and maintaining tactical weapons and electronic combat systems and ranges, which included 30 types of radars and radar simulators. In July 2000, after retiring from Lockheed Martin, Sabourin accepted the position of director of operations for Enterprise Electronics Corporation, where he is responsible for planning, directing, administering, coordinating, and controlling day-to-day activities of the company.

Enterprise Electronics Corporation designs and manufactures high-performance Doppler weather radar systems and research-quality data analysis and display software. ●
