Constraining the ratio of global warming to cumulative CO₂ emissions using CMIP5 simulations: Supplemental Figure

Nathan P. Gillett, Vivek K. Arora,
Canadian Centre for Climate Modelling and Analysis, Environment Canada, Victoria, BC, Canada

Damon Matthews,
Department of Geography, Planning and the Environment, Concordia University, Montreal, QC, Canada

Myles R. Allen,
School of Geography and the Environment, University of Oxford, UK
Fig. S1. As Figure 4a, except showing the results of a regression of observed temperature anomalies onto the simulated anthropogenic response (red) and the natural forcing response (blue). Results were derived using the ALL and NAT simulations from each model.